NPS Survey CX OS

Readiness is measured once a year. Quality of life happens every day.

Annual surveys arrive months after the broken repair, the hard PCS move or the confusing system rollout. Measure each moment inside the platform where the work already happens, and act the same day.

The timing problem

The services take quality of life seriously: the Army's 2026 tenant survey alone reached more than 200,000 residents. But a once-a-year survey run outside daily systems shows trends after the fact, when the family has already moved or the soldier has already decided.

Why now

In January 2026 the Army awarded Salesforce a 10-year contract to modernize personnel, recruiting and support for soldiers, veterans and families. Feedback can now live on the same platform as the service it measures.

From moments to action

Moments, not years

Pulse questions when a housing work order closes, a PCS finishes, a course ends, or a new system has been in use 30, 60 and 90 days.

Owned by the chain

A low score creates a task for the responsible NCO, officer or housing office, with a due date and a record of the response.

Leaders see the trend

Installation and command dashboards show where quality of life is improving or slipping, before the annual survey does.

Where to start

- Installation housing maintenance
- PCS and in-processing
- Training and course completion
- New personnel or HR system adoption
- Family, MWR and support services
- Command climate pulse between annual surveys
